

Map of the Botanical Conservatory

Each plant in the Conservatory has its own climatic requirements, so the greenhouse is divided into smaller rooms where the various temperatures and humidities that mimic native environments can be controlled. Within each room, the plants are separated by family (or by plant type), so you can see the many similarities and variations between related plants.

